Lashar was of the opinion that it was the commission's duty to get the pavement laid right and as quickly as possible. He was of the mind that it should not concern their in the least with the question of 10 ft. centers.

President M. H. Rogers during the interval that Supt. Chapman was out of the room said that the superintendent had stated that the company wanted to increase its dummy gauge in order to avoid law suits and that he (Rogers) did not see how Mr. Chap-man could make the statement jibe with that of Engineer C. C. Elwell who had told the commission at a previous meeting that the company had never been obliged to pay a cent in damages for accidents resulting

The irregularities in procedure did not cease with the election of military enrollment registrars, as the question of allowing the traction company a ten-foot center on Main street brought forth another odd situation.

The word finally resulted in a tie the The vote finally resulted in a tie, the mayor breaking it by voting with those who opposed granting the company the privilege. The matter was brought to the attention of the Council by Alderman Gould, who that the action taken by the Council at the last meeting when the company was refused permission for the increased centre be rescinded.

When a rising vote was taken the result showed 10 for and 10 against rescinding the action taken. The mayor then broke the tie by voting to rescind, thus showing his personal stand in a matter about which he evidently changed his mind later in the evening. At this point Alderman Griffin said that it was the rule of the Council for hat it was the rule of the Council for all members present to vote. Alderman Hartley was of the opinion that all those not voting should be counted on the offirmative side of the question.

The mayor insisted that every alderman should vote, but again 4 members declined to arise.

Alderman Near explained that he was one of those who did not vote, and said that he did not feel convinced one way or the other as yet, but as alderman Mahoney, who is a teamster, felt that the enlarged centre would not interfere with traffic, he said that he supposed he might as well vote to rescind. At the next call for a vote the former action was rescribed 12 to 10.
